TOWED BY A SHARK.

Dory from Sch. Frances V. Silvia Nearly Swamped.

A monster shark nearly hauled two fishermen, William Jason and Joseph Bent, of sch. Francis V. Silvia overboard when they were fishing in South channel Saturday morning. Caught in the trawl, the big fish dragged the little dory containing the two men at such speed that it was almost completely hidden in a shower of water and spray. Only the presence of mind of Jason, who cut the trawl, saved the men.

"Good God, it's a shark," cried Bent, as a huge fin appeared in the water a few feet from the dory. There was an ominous splash and the shark darted off at the rate of 18 knots. The head of the dory was pulled down almost to the water's edge and with water and spray dashing over the men as the little craft was hauled through the water, the dory began to fill rapidly. Every wave sent buckets of water aboard as the little dory cut through, drawn by the maddened shark only a few boat lengths ahead. The fishermen shouted to their shipmates, who were fishing on all sides of them.

"Cut your trawl," called out William O'Donnell, who was close by, fishing with his mate, George Brazil.

Jason snatched a knife from the bottom of the dory and cut both ends of the trawl. The dory righted and fishermen found themselves standing knee-deep in water, but saved. They were soon on board the schooner.

Japan's Fishing Rights.

It is not generally realized how great a plum Japan has in the fishing rights which she has acquired by the peace treaty, yet this article of the treaty is one of the most important in a business way, and it will reach a great many Japs. The Sakhalin Island fisheries alone are said to be worth $30,000,000 annually, and the fisheries in the Sea of Okhotsk and in Behring Sea are said to be of "incalculable" value. Probably they are worth as much to Japan as the salmon, herring, cod, whale and seal fisheries of the north are to the United States. With this great annual revenue coming her way, Japan need not worry seriously over the loss of this indemnity.

Dead Whale Menace to Navigation.

A derelict whale is the latest danger reported lurking in the middle Atlantic, directly in the course of trans-Atlantic trade. Last Wednesday the tramp steamship, St. Andrew, of the Phoenix line, at New York Friday, ran into a flat head whale, measuring eighty or ninety feet, and cut off ten feet of its tail.

The St. Andrew was not injured by the encounter, but the mutilated whale, according to the captain, will probably float there like the derelict of a ship, and prove a menace to smaller craft.

ENCOURAGED BY SUCCESS.

Newfoundland May Build Big Fleet for Labrador Fishery.

A despatch to the New York Fishing Gazette says that the success of the Labrador fishery will lead to larger outfitting for the voyage than ever next season. It is expected that 50 new schooners will be built at Bonavista Bay, N. F., the coming winter.

NEWS FROM NORTH BAY.

Capt. William J. Corkum Writes an Interesting Letter.

His Vessel and S. F. Maker Are Picking Up Some Fish.

A letter received here yesterday from Capt. William J. Corkum of the sch. Priscilla Smith of this port, which is now on a mackerel trip to the North Bay, is dated at Souris, P. E. I., September 23, and states that the prospect is about the same since he wrote last and that he was picking up some fish each fine day. About all the fish taken recently were small and he had taken but three barrels of large fish in the last ten days' fishing. He states that the dogfish are plenty and giving lots of trouble.

Since arriving in the bay he had taken 72 barrels of small fish and 22 barrels of large fish. The sch. S. F. Maker, Capt. S. Campbell Peart, which was in port at the time he was writing the letter, had taken 32 barrels of large fish and 15 barrels of tinkers.

Capt. Corkum states that the big fish do not show and that the tinkers are schooling some. The Maker had got more large fish by heaving more bait and taking them on the jig, she having quite a lot of bait while the Smith's supply was too limited to use very freely.

Capt. Corkum believed that both vessels would pick up trips before they came home. He intended to stay in the bay quite a while and then go to North Sydney, C. B. so to be ready for the late fall fall spurt of mackerel on the Cape Shore on the next dark of the moon.

BOUGHT STEAMER.

Portland Cold Storage Company Soon Ready for Business.

The steamer Elthier, owned by Boothbay parties, has been purchased by the Portland Cold Storage Company of Portland and is to be used in connection with the herring and other fishing industries in which this company is to engage. This is the company that was organized several weeks ago by Portland, Boothbay and Gloucester fish dealers for the purpose of doing a cold storage business, particularly in the line of fish.

The company has leased the building occupied for so many years by Trefethen, Bearce & Co., at the head of Central wharf on Commercial street, Portland, and after extensive alterations have been made the company will open up for business about the middle of October.

The steamer Elthier, yesterday, received the government inspection and the last of the week will commence work in the fisheries, going to the vicinity of Clapboard island where the herring are now schooling in large quantities.

C. N. Trefethen, of the firm of J. W. Trefethen & Co., of Portland, is the president of the new company, and the treasurer is W. T. Maddocks of Boothbay Harbor. The manager of the cold storage plant is to be James Poole of Boothbay.

HOME AHEAD OF VESSEL.

Missing Men Greeted Sch. Winnifred on Arrival.

Picked Up by Sch. Ella M. Goodwin of This Port.

As the sch. Winnifred of Boston shot up to T wharf, yesterday, with her flag at half-mast for the supposed loss of two of her crew, James Willneff and George Eaton of this port, a young man standing on the wharf shouted, "Hi there, skipper, we got in all right." It was Willneff, one of the supposed lost men. He and Eaton, after going astray, had been picked up by the sch. Ella M. Goodwin, Capt. James Goodwin of this port, off Seal Island and landed at Malone Bay, N. S.

Sch. Winnifred was fishing about 20 miles off the Nova Scotia coast a week ago last Monday. While making a set, the fog rolled in and they lost the vessel, the swift tide carrying them to leeward as they rowed in the direction they supposed her to be. Finding themselves astray, they started to row for Seal Island, believing they could reach it by dark. The tide changed and began to take them in very fast toward land and late in the afternoon they heard the faint sound of a horn ahead.

They rowed on until the tide shifted again and then being unable to make headway against it, so strong was it running, put over the anchor, but it would not hold and the fierce tide swept them out to sea again. Part of the night they backed steadily at the oars, hoping to hold their own. They rowed until they were exhausted and dropped into the bottom of the dory while the tide swept them out to sea.

They sighted the Goodwin, set a signal of distress, which was seen and they were soon picked up and taken on board the vessel, where they were finely treated. Next day they were put on board the fishing steamer Daylight and landed at Malone Bay, where they stayed two days and then went to Lunenburg and thence to Yarmouth and were sent home by the U. S. Consul.

Capt. Hanson of the Winnifred reports the tide running off the Nova Scotia coast in that vicinity the strongest he ever saw it.

FLITCHES SOLD.

Two Fares Were Taken Care of This Morning.

Buyers Are Offering Six Cents Per Pound.

The ice in the flitched halibut situation was broken today when two of the five fares now in port were sold, the Atlanta to Slade Gorton & Co. and the Arkona to Red & Gamage each at six cents per pound. Some of these vessels have been home almost three weeks, two of them arriving last week. A few days ago the buyers met the skippers and owners and the latter were informed that the most they could pay was six cents a pound. Yesterday none sold but this morning the two above were disposed of at that figure. The price is considerably lower than last year.
